ABSTRACT

A method for analyzing a semiconductor device tests a semiconductor device to produce first and second data. A clustering method is applied to the first data, creating a clustered first data. The clustered first data is then correlated with the second data to 5   determine analyzed data.